Large-Firm Experience, Small-Firm Prices

Comprised of five partners, all with experience at large law firms, Rajkovich, Williams, Kilpatrick, and True PLLC is equipped to handle a range of business and individual clients, including budding entrepreneurs and large companies.

“Being a smaller, more flexible firm, we can provide clients with the same experience they would get at a large firm but at a rate that doesn’t break the bank,” says Melanie Kilpatrick, a founding partner in 2005 along with Marco Rajkovich, John Williams, and Noelle Holladay True. Todd Myers joined in 2012.

Previously, the founders had worked together at a large law firm. “That firm was getting larger, and we wanted to go another direction,” says Williams. “We wanted to start a practice to see if we could make a go of it, and fortunately, we have.”

The firm helps clients at every stage of a business, from startup and expansion to divestment and dissolution. The attorneys are equipped to consult on a diverse range of industries, with extensive expertise in mining, engineering, and construction. They regularly practice in state and federal courts in Kentucky and before the Federal Mine Safety and Health Review Commission and the Kentucky Mine Safety Review Commission.

Partners in Growth

The firm takes a holistic approach to its business services. “It’s easy to find a lawyer to do a specific task for you, like drawing up a deed,” says Williams. “But we want to learn more about clients’ ultimate business goals so we can become long-term partners. It also allows us to be more flexible when considering different pricing mechanisms.”

A deep bench of firm expertise means that if unexpected issues arise, most clients won’t have to go elsewhere. “Even if something rises to litigation, we can handle it,” says Williams.

The team advises new businesses to get a lawyer involved from the beginning to prevent potential problems from becoming emergencies. “Folks think they’re saving themselves money by not getting a lawyer early in the game,” says Williams. “If you’re with a law firm that you trust, you’re going to be glad you had a professional involved from day one.”
